About the Herbert Smith Freehills - SMU Asian Arbitration Lecture Series

The Herbert Smith Freehills - SMU Asian Arbitration Lecture Series was established in 2010 and was made possible by a term fund contribution by Herbert Smith Freehills.

The objective of the Lecture Series is to promote collaborative forms of dispute resolution and access to justice and in so doing promote Singapore as the centre for dispute resolution in Asia, particularly in arbitration and mediation.

Each year, a distinguished international arbitrator will be invited to present this lecture, which in turn will be published in a leading regional arbitration journal.

ASEAN'S ROLE AND OPPORTUNITIES IN PUBLIC AND PRIVATE DISPUTE RESOLUTION

As the Association of Southeast Asian Nations celebrates its 50th year, the Secretary-General has said that "ASEAN's effort in the next decade will be focused on realising a truly rules-based community" (Le Luong Minh, August 2017). Echoing this, one of his predecessors was reported as saying that "to aid this goal, ASEAN should streamline its large body of agreements by reviewing existing treaties and dispute settlement mechanisms, and prioritise and use them accordingly …ASEAN needs to develop a more comprehensive way to resolve disputes" (Ong Keng Yong, Secretary-General 2003-2008, May 2017).

As a topical and timely contribution, the 2017 Asian Arbitration lecture will focus on ASEAN's role and opportunities in the field of public and private dispute resolution. Historically, ASEAN has focussed on providing machinery for settlement of disputes between its member states, and between member states and private investors. Do these mechanisms work, what are the challenges and is there scope for improvement? Will the current climate of re-examination of multilateral trading agreements, and controversies over investor-state arbitration, influence ASEAN's approach? Should ASEAN enter new arenas, for example should it engage more actively with disputes between member and non-member states, or private sector disputes? Is there a case for a new regional court or a supra-national arbitration centre?

Former ASEAN Secretary-General Dr. Surin Pitsuwan (2008-2013) will discuss the significance of these questions for the project to promote a rules-based community in an ever-more complex globalised environment.
